Parents contribute to their child's assessment by doing some or all of the following:

- Making decisions about the presence of delays in the child's developmental status and for making an informed decision about their child's eligibility for intervention services.

- They share their observations during the assessment process and activities where your child is struggling or is excelling to help the evaluation team.

- By contributing their experiences, parents of young children who are eligible for early intervention services can describe their child's strengths, needs, and eligibility for intervention services.

- They do this by describing behaviors your child is able to do, is just learning to do, and/or is not yet able to do, is just beginning to do.

- They do this by describing behaviors your child is able to do, is just learning to do, and/or is not yet able to do, is just beginning to do.

- They do this by describing behaviors your child is able to do, is just learning to do, and/or is not yet able to do, is just beginning to do.

- They do this by describing behaviors your child is able to do, is just learning to do, and/or is not yet able to do, is just beginning to do.

- They do this by describing behaviors your child is able to do, is just learning to do, and/or is not yet able to do, is just beginning to do.